This research aims to investigate the effectiveness of English songs in increasing listening skill of students of MA Nurul Jadid. This study used quantitative approach with single research design as the research method. The population of the study was X Language class students at MA Nurul Jadid Paiton Probolinggo consisting of 62 students. The sample used was X Language 2 class students consisting of 22 students selected through purposive sampling technique. The instruments used were observation, test and questionnaire. The test was used to measure the students' listening skill, while the questionnaire was used to collect data on the students' listening to English songs. The data was processed using SPSS and Pearson correlation test was conducted to test the research hypothesis.

The results showed that effectiveness of English songs has a significant positive in increasing listening skill. The correlation between the variables of English songs and increasing listening skill was found to be 0.845, which indicates a very strong relationship. Therefore, the alternative hypothesis is accepted and the null hypothesis is rejected. This finding is consistent with previous research which shows that activities using songs as learning tools can improve listening skill. English songs can personally motivate students to look up the meanings of words in song lyrics and help increasing listening skill. In conclusion, English songs is effective in creasing listening skill of MA Nurul Jadid students. Further studies can investigate the long-term effectiv of English songs in increasing listening skill and its effectiv on students with different levels of proficiency.
